About This Content

Checkmate ends the game – that's an undeniable fact. Yet sometimes players who gleefully and unashamedly play for the attack are treated as a joke by their colleagues. Launching a successful attack is a skillful business that often demands great creativity.

And like most themes in chess, this is a skill that can be honed and polished. In the second edition of the Power Play series, Grandmaster Daniel King looks at attacking play and asks what makes for a successful attack.

Test your attacking and defensive skills by examining a series of specially selected test positions. The Power Play series is suitable for anyone looking to improve their chess, and provides ready-made lessons and exercises for a trainer.

Grandmaster Daniel King has been a professional chess player for more than 20 years. During that time he has represented his country on many occasions, including an historic match victory over the Soviet Union in Reykjavik, 1990. At the same time he has distinguished himself as a coach, helping many of England's younger generation to achieve their potential. Besides his chess career, he has built up a reputation as a commentator on television, radio and the internet. He is also an award-winning author of more than 15 books.

Chess application interface showing a chessboard and a video feed of a player.

The chessboard is a standard 8x8 grid. White pieces are on the bottom half (ranks 1-4) and Black pieces are on the top half (ranks 5-8). A green arrow points upwards from the white pawn on e4 to the black pawn on e5.

The video feed on the right shows a man with short dark hair, wearing a dark shirt, looking directly at the camera. Below the video are standard controls: Play, Stop, Mute, Unmute, and a volume icon.
